TURKISH DELIGHT

My misfortunes are naked and slope steeply,
The skittish ricochets gaze at the sea
To kiss me voluptuously like a prawn
It sends my little opium tears to sleep
Infinite science, mandarin character of the moon
That's my garment, a kite of frozen honey.
I wrote on the converted bed of the summer months
That to fondle one's breasts several times
In the closed museum
Under globular clothing
Becomes the make-up on a clock.
The alcohol cross on the poetic blue chin
Reveals a lantern-barrier to me,
The dancer's redoubtable about-turn
On the platform track
In the silent unforeseen of an empty lane
I am on the mountain of proud women
Sculpted up to the neck.

SCHÖN

„Wer einen Vogel hat, der hat eben einen Vogel.“ Da kann man nichts machen

(Aus dem Land des Irrsinn)

Und schließlich haben ja alle Menschen in gewisser Weise einen Vogel. Da kann man auch nichts machen.
Gar nichts kann man machen.

Mein Land des Irrsinn, von dem ich träume, ist gewissermaßen ein Land des Lächelns, weil man doch nicht kann: „Ein Land des Weinens!“

Irren ist mein Schicksal, doch nicht alle Menschen verstehen zu lächeln. Mit diesen Menschen soll hier eine Abrechnung gemacht werden.
